Women of Woodstock Celebrate Success With Silent Auction for Relay for Life

Woodstock, GA, April 2, 2014 — WOW, a powerful group of women business owners who are making an impact in the community, recently hosted a silent auction amongst its members to help raise awareness for Relay for Life. The organization held its silent auction Tuscany Italian restaurant located in the heart of Woodstock.

Since the founding of the organization WOW has continued to leave its mark within the community by being effective philanthropist and remaining active with organizations such as Relay for Life. Through hard work and dedication, the executive board along with the members have raised over a total of $1104.00 to donate to the American Cancer Society via Relay for Life!

Robert Sprague, Event Co-Chair of the Cherokee Relay for Life expressed his gratitude by saying, "I cannot express adequately the extent of my appreciation for WOW and their humble support of the American Cancer Society and the Cherokee County Relay for Life. My association with WOW started a year ago with the intent of simply offering information about the Relay heritage and the overall mission to a group of business people who might feel compelled to participate in some manner. This year their moral support was only exceeded by their generosity when they earned enough donations to become recognized as a formal sponsor and designated their inspiration to my personal appeal. Their only recognition request is the T-Shirt, event program and on-site signage."

Sprague goes on to claim, "The WOW effort is significant as a single private organization. WOW members work year round to establish such credibility within the Cherokee County and get its residents actively involved."
